Why are Islamic State (ISIS) such a threat to British values?

ambition to be outstanding in every way"

Why is ISIS such a threat to young people?

- Since the start of the conflict in Syria in 2011, over 500 young British people have joined ISIS in Syria. This includes 60 girls.

How do extremists groom young people?

ISIS use different forms of social media to either persuade young people to join their forces in Syria / Iraq or carry out terrorist attacks in their own country.

How have young girls been groomed into joining ISIS?

- The promise of excitement and fighting for ISIS forces against anti-Islamic people.
- The promise of being married to a young, attractive and rich ISIS fighter.
- The promise of a nice house to live in and a wealthy lifestyle.
- The promise of freedom as they no longer have to do what their family tells them.
- The promise of further education to develop a deeper understanding of the Islamic faith

The reality is very different for girls once they have arrived.

Why is the far right a threat to young people?

A BBC investigation has found children and teenagers are being recruited online by new groups of far right extremists, as Hywel Griffith reports

"Share our ambition to be outstanding in every way"

What are the signs that someone is being radicalised?

1. Being overly secretive about their online viewing – this being one of the core ways in which ISIS is known to communicate.
2. Displaying feelings of isolation or expressions of an ‘us and them’ mentality – a sign of the sense of social isolation.
3. Becoming more argumentative or domineering in their viewpoints, being quick to condemn those who disagree and ignoring views that contradict their own.
4. Questioning their faith or identity.
5. Downloading or promotion extremist content.
6. Social isolation – losing interest in activities they used to enjoy, distancing themselves from friends and social groups.
7. Altered appearance – change in style of dress and/or personal appearance.
8. Abnormal routines, travel patterns or aspirations.

How can you stay safe against extremism?

- Support our values (British / College)
- Stand up to people who don't show respect for others
- Be aware that online extremists try to 'groom' young people into joining their cause (the same way sex offenders do)
- Report any concerns you have to your parents or a teacher e.g. a friend has started following an extremist group and their behaviour is changing
